Tropical Activity

Central Pacific – Disturbance #1

- Located approximately 1300 miles east-southeast of Hilo, Hawaii.
- A large area of disorganized showers and thunderstorms is associated with two disturbances over the western portion of the East Pacific basin.
- These systems are expected to merge later today or tonight, and gradual development is expected after they merge.
- A tropical depression is likely to form within the next couple of days while the disturbance moves west northwestward into the Central Pacific basin Wednesday night or early Thursday.
- Formation chance through 48 hours...high...80 percent.
- Formation chance through 7 days...high...80 percent.

Flood Activity

Connecticut

- The torrential rain that led to catastrophic and deadly flooding in portions of Connecticut over the weekend has come to an end.
- Now the cleanup efforts are underway to inspect infrastructure and remove debris from damaged roadways and bridges.
- Connecticut Gov. Ned Lamont declared a statewide emergency after Sunday's historic flooding in western Connecticut.
- "The sudden and severe flooding has caused significant damage to infrastructure in the western portion of the state, resulting in evacuations, rescues, and more than two dozen road closures that we anticipate will need to be closed for an extended period," Lamont said.
- The flooding has claimed at least two lives as of Monday afternoon.
- Flooding was reported in communities along the Interstate 95 corridor, like Stamford, many rural communities took the brunt of the devastation.
- "The heaviest rains really seems to set up from Monroe up into Beacon Falls, and definitely some more rural parts of the state, but away from our major highways like I-95 and I-84" Turner said.
- Significant damage from the widespread flash flooding led to the declaration of local states of emergency in the towns of Southbury and Naugatuck.
