Severe Weather Outlook Northeast

- A rapidly intensifying storm system will exacerbate travel disruptions in the Northeast over the next few days.
- With heavy rain, gusty winds and severe weather affecting the Interstate 95 corridor, while accumulating snow in the interior will make travel hazardous around the Great Lakes.
- The system began producing showers and thunderstorms across the South on Tuesday.
- The days of the most significant impacts are expected to be Wednesday and Thursday.
- Forecast models show a widespread 1-3 inches of rain stretching from the Appalachians into the Northeast, with locally heavier amounts.
- Included in the heavy rainfall zones are Boston, New York City and Baltimore.
- Flood Watches have been issued for millions of residents in the Northeast.
- The combination of rainfall and snowmelt could be problematic for some communities in Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.
- A strong pressure gradient will trigger winds to near hurricane-force along the coastline.
- Wind gusts of 40-60 mph could be problematic between New York City and Boston, where High Wind Warnings were in effect.

Disaster Declaration Activity West Virginia

- On December 9th, President Joseph R. Biden, Jr. declared that a major disaster exists in the State of West Virginia and ordered Federal assistance to supplement state and local recovery efforts in the areas affected by Post-Tropical Storm Helene from September 25 to September 28, 2024.
- The President's action makes Federal funding available to affected individuals in Mercer County.
- Tropical storm Helene left widespread destruction in its wake, damaging homes, businesses, and other infrastructure.
- On October 25, 2024, Gov. Jim Justice requested a major disaster declaration for the remnants of Hurricane Helene and individual assistance for the counties of Raleigh and Mercer.
