WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

July 23, 2024

Flash Flood Threat

- Torrential rain and thunderstorms are continuing to make life miserable for tens of millions of people across the South, from Texas to the Southeast and mid-Atlantic, as a stalled-out cold front and deep tropical moisture combine to produce copious amounts of precipitation.
- This is now the second straight week that the South has been relentlessly pounded by heavy rain and storms.
- Because of the heavy rain and the slow movement of these downpours, flash flooding has become a concern.
- On Tuesday, west central and central portions of Texas appear to be the target of widespread thunderstorms capable of producing high rainfall rates that could add up to more than 3 inches per hour.
- Street flooding will be possible in areas caught under the strongest of the storms.
