November 26, 2024

2024 Hurricane Season Recap

- The 2024 Atlantic hurricane season was marked by an unusual pattern of storm development.
- Between June 1 and the end of November, 18 named storms formed across the basin, with 11 becoming hurricanes and five strengthening into major cyclones.
- Eight hurricanes made landfall; five of which struck the U.S.
- The numbers were above the averages of 14 named storms, 7 hurricanes and 3 major storms that form during a typical season.
- The first named storm, Tropical Storm Alberto, didn't form until June 19 — marking the slowest start to the hurricane season in a decade.
- A period from mid-September through October helped to make up for the shortfall.
- 10 named storms formed, three of which made landfall along the U.S. Gulf Coast as hurricanes.
- Initial damage estimates put losses at around $200 billion, making 2024 the second-costliest season on record.
