WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

December 20, 2024

Severe Weather Outlook West Coast

- The FOX Forecast Center is tracking a series of storms moving into the West and Northwest for the start of the weekend.
- These will be weak to moderate events; the prolonged period of windy and generally unsettled conditions will remain into the holiday week.
- The flooding risk looks to remain low into the start of the weekend, but that changes by Monday.
- For portions of the West Coast from San Francisco to Seattle, moderate to even heavy rain could result in a low-end risk for flash flooding.
- Through Tuesday, portions of Northern California and coastal Oregon could see upwards of 6 inches of rain.
- Snow levels remain generally high for this event.
- Most of the significant snow will be confined to portions of the Cascade Mountains, northern Sierra Mountains and northern Rockies.
