February 13, 2024

Winter Weather Activity Northeast

- A nor'easter is pushing off the mid-Atlantic coast Tuesday morning and bringing snow to millions of people in the Northeast and southern New England, with forecasters warning that snowfall rates in the New York City tri-state area could approach 1-2 inches per hour throughout the morning commute.
- The nor'easter is part of the same system that impacted the Southeast on Monday, bringing severe weather to millions before it continued northeast, where it will move off the East Coast and start to strengthen.
- The FOX Forecast Center said the nor'easter started as rain in many areas, but winter weather has started to take over as colder air works its way into the winter storm.
- As much as 10.5 inches of snow has already piled up in Jim Thorpe in the Poconos of northeastern Pennsylvania. Farther to the northeast, Dingmans Ferry, Pennsylvania, is not far behind with 10 inches of snow so far.
- Winter weather alerts stretch from West Virginia to Massachusetts, with more than 32 million people under a Winter Storm Warning, including New York City and Providence in Rhode Island.
- The Winter Storm Warnings are also in effect for cities such as Scranton and Allentown in Pennsylvania, Newark and Trenton in New Jersey and Bridgeport, New Haven and New London in Connecticut.
