WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

March 1, 2022

Winter Storm Activity

Pacific Northwest

- The National Weather Service has issued a flood warning for six western Washington rivers as heavy rainfall continues from the weekend into Monday.
- The flood warnings are in effect for the following rivers:
 - Puyallup River near Orting (affecting Pierce County)
 - Chehalis River above Doty (affecting Lewis County-- in effect until early Thursday morning); Chehalis River above Grand Mound (affecting Grays Harbor and Thurston Counties-- in effect until early Thursday morning)
 - Newaukum River near Chehalis (affecting Lewis County-- in effect until early Thursday morning)
 - Nisqually River near Ashford (affecting Lewis and Pierce Counties)
 - Cowlitz River at Randle (affecting Lewis County)
 - Naches River near Cliffdell in Yakima County (in effect until early Wednesday morning)
- According to the NWS, prolonged rainfall coupled with snow runoff in mid to low elevations and strong winds are driving several rivers above minor to major flooding.
- In King County, some rivers are in phase two of flooding, including the White River, Snoqualmie River, Cedar River and the Tolt River
- The Skokomish River in Mason County was at flood levels Monday morning and dozens more were expected to crest by Monday night or Tuesday morning.
- Atmospheric river remains in the region, calling for another wet 12 to 18 hours. Several locations could reach into the top five wettest February days on record by the end of the day Monday, according to the National Weather Service.
- Normal precipitation for the entire month of February in Seattle is 3.76 inches, according to the National Weather Service. In the past 48 hours, Seattle has seen 3.73 inches of rain.
