November 1, 2021

Tropical Activity

Atlantic – Subtropical Storm Wanda

- Subtropical Storm Wanda formed in the Atlantic over the weekend, and while it will not impact any land areas, the storm has finished off the list of names for the 2021 hurricane season.
- Wanda is located far from land in the north-central Atlantic Ocean, where it will meander the next few days. It's not expected to intensify into a hurricane and won't directly affect any land areas.
- This is the 21st named storm to develop in the Atlantic this year, which means the entire list of names for the 2021 hurricane season has been used up.
- Any additional storms that form in the Atlantic through the end of this season will come from a supplemental list beginning with the name Adria.

Declaration Activity

DR-4629 Connecticut

- President Joe Biden has granted Connecticut a Major Disaster Declaration to aid in Ida recovery, prompting the release of federal funding to many impacted.
- State officials said the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) underwent several weeks of data requirement, which is required to qualify for the declaration. The assessment included a calculation of FEMA-eligible damage in order to determine whether the required federal thresholds have been met.
- On Saturday, Biden officially granted this declaration, which will in turn provide a resource for many residents impacted by the storm which swept through the state in September.
- Individual assistance, which is help for individuals and households, is available for certain areas most impacted by the storm. This includes Fairfield and New London counties, as well as the Mashantucket Pequot Tribal Nation and the Mohegan Tribal Nation.
