Snow Northeast

- Another winter storm is unleashing its fury across the central U.S., bringing heavy snow and ice to portions of the Plains and Midwest.
- The FOX Forecast Center said that heavy snow is possible from Kansas City, Missouri, to Chicago and Detroit in the Great Lakes region on Wednesday.
- Out of all the storm systems the FOX Forecast Center has been tracking this week, this one looks to be the one that could be the snowiest in terms of totals and coverage.
- Snowfall rates of about an inch per hour are expected to produce at least 4 inches of total snow accumulation.
- From central Kansas northeastward through much of lower Michigan, including Kansas City, Chicago, Milwaukee and Detroit.
- This winter storm could be the biggest snowstorm of the season so far for several Midwest cities, including Chicago and Detroit.
- Forecasters are concerned about more than snow; ice could also become an issue in Oklahoma, Missouri and parts of Ohio.
- Winter Storm Warnings are in effect from Kansas and southern Nebraska to western Illinois and eastern Wisconsin. Winter Weather Advisories cover Chicago, St. Louis and Indianapolis.
- As the storm moves into the Northeast and New England on Thursday, it will bring with it some warmer air from the south.
- A Winter Storm Warning has been issued for northern Maine due to the threat of up to a foot of snow.
