WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

February 27, 2024

Severe Weather Outlook

- More than 54 million people are at risk of severe weather in the Midwest on Tuesday, including major metropolitan areas such as Chicago, Indianapolis, and Detroit, as a powerful cross-country storm tracks east.
- Tuesday morning is expected to remain on the quiet side, but as the day continues, the atmosphere will become more unstable with moisture streaming in from the south ahead of a powerful cold front moving in from the west, as well as the lack of cloud cover during the day.
- The explosive development of thunderstorms expected during the day and into the evening and overnight hours on Tuesday is also being fueled by record warmth ahead of the cold front, as well as a blast of cold air behind it.
- NOAA's Storm Prediction Center (SPC) has placed more than 38 million people in a Level 2 out of 5 on its 5-point severe thunderstorm risk scale.
- This area stretches from eastern Missouri to Ohio and southern Michigan and includes major cities such as Chicago, Indianapolis, and Detroit. Other cities in that risk include Louisville in Kentucky and Cincinnati, Columbus, and Cleveland in Ohio.
- Forecasters said there is the threat of tornadoes, large hail and damaging wind gusts with any thunderstorms that develop through Tuesday night.
