Severe Weather Outlook

- Severe storms could produce damaging hail, high winds and a few tornadoes from Texas to the Gulf Coast through midweek.
- Scattered showers are ongoing across parts of the south-central region right now.
- Damaging hail, high winds and an isolated tornado threat are most likely in north-central Texas, including Dallas-Fort Worth, Waco and Tyler. Hailstones the size of golf balls or larger could accompany some of the storms.
- At least isolated severe storms are possible as far north as Oklahoma, as far south as coastal Texas and as far east as western Louisiana and southwest Arkansas.
- Flash flooding from heavy rainfall could impact areas from northern Texas and Oklahoma into the lower Mississippi Valley as well.

Declaration Activity Oklahoma

- The White House has approved Governor Kevin Stitt's request for federal disaster assistance following severe storms and tornados last week.
- After the storm, Stitt declared a state of emergency in Lincoln, Cleveland, McClain, Oklahoma, and Pottawatomie counties.

N/A

 Those who live or own a business in McClain and Pottawatomie counties, and were impacted by the severe weather, may qualify for disaster aid through FEMA.
