Wildfire Activity Southern California

- Firefighters continue to battle nine wildfires in Southern California, which have scorched more than 50,000 acres.
- Two massive fires, the deadly Palisades and Eaton fires, have been raging near Los Angeles since Jan. 7 with containment efforts reaching 75% and 95%.
- Several new outbreaks are still appearing this week, including several in the counties of Ventura and Riverside, as well as near San Diego.
- A new wildfire, dubbed "Border 2," has erupted near Chula Vista, just 9 miles southeast of San Diego, prompting early morning evacuation orders Friday. The blaze, currently spanning 800 acres, is exhibiting extreme fire behavior near the U.S.-Mexico border, authorities said.
- As of Friday, the Hughes Fire in Los Angeles County has forced thousands to evacuate.
- The Laguna Fire near Camarillo in Ventura County has been contained at 50 acres.
- While wind gusts are expected to be less severe Friday, ongoing low humidity remains a major concern.
