Tornado Activity

Texas

- A tornado swept through a portion of a city in suburban Houston, displacing about 500 people from a damaged apartment complex, officials said Thursday.
- A strong storm swept through Texas City around 6 p.m. on Wednesday, causing heavy damage to a 129-unit apartment complex, said Tom Munoz, Texas City's emergency management coordinator.
- The National Weather Service confirmed on Thursday the damage was caused by an EF1 tornado, which has wind speeds of 86-110 mph.
- The tornado initially displaced 16 families, who spent Wednesday night at a hotel. But after inspectors reviewed the apartment complex on Thursday, officials determined the structure was not safe and asked all residents to evacuate, Munoz said.

Louisiana

- Strong storms blew through Acadiana on Wednesday night, bringing with them damage for parts of St. Martin Parish.
- Chief Meteorologist Rob Perillo says the National Weather Service has surveyed the damage in St. Martin Parish and confirmed a tornado touched down between Parks and Breaux Bridge on Grand Bois Road.
- The tornado was either a high end EF1 or low end EF2, with roughly 110 mph winds or higher, depending on the final evaluation.
- A single-wide mobile home was rolled over and completely destroyed but was not occupied at the time. No injuries have been reported with the severe storm.
