Flash Flood Outlook

Gulf Coast & Southeast

- The Gulf Coast and Southeast are bracing for a multiday wet-weather event that will deliver the heaviest precipitation of the year, with many communities picking up 3-5 inches of rain and isolated areas seeing even more.
- Computer forecast models show at least three plumes of moisture developing through the workweek, which will be the main focus of the heavy rainfall.
- According to the FOX Forecast Center, a wide swath of the Gulf Coast and Southeast could pick up 3-5 inches of rainfall, with isolated areas approaching 10 inches.
- Both Houston and New Orleans are included in the excessive rainfall zone, where totals could reach around a half-foot by the end of the week.
- As accumulations mount, so will the potential for flash flooding, which will likely require watches and warnings to be issued during the workweek.

Severe Weather Activity

South Carolina

- Following the destructive tornado that struck Bamberg on January 9th, the town has declared state of emergency.
- The EF-2 tornado had winds of 125 mph and was on the ground for 2.15 miles with a maximum width of 500 yards.
- While there were no reported injuries or deaths, the winds did cause major destruction to downtown buildings, power lines, and homes throughout Bamberg.
- The city is working to get federal funds to help with the damage, however Mayor Foster is concerned whether the city's damage will reach the financial threshold.

Disaster Update

DR-4749 Illinois

- Cook County homeowners and renters with uninsured or under insured losses from the Sept. 17-18, 2023, severe storms and flooding have until Friday, Feb. 9.
- The application deadline was recently extended by three weeks to allow more time for affected residents to apply.
