WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

August 9, 2024

Tropical Activity

Post Tropical Debby

- Debby was downgraded to a post-tropical storm Friday morning, but the flood and severe threat from the storm remain into the weekend.
- The storm is now spiraling up the Eastern Seaboard with several Tornado Warnings already issued, including briefly near Washington.
- River gauges are reading high Friday as numerous rivers from Florida to New York are either approaching or at flood stage.
- In Moncks Corner, South Carolina, a Flash Flood Emergency was issued Friday due to Debby.
- Homes were flooded, and even more roads were closed due to 2-3 feet of fast-moving water. Emergency officials said they got 9 inches of rain during the event.
- "Please note that an additional 2 inches of rain is forecasted for this afternoon, which may lead to further flooding due to the saturated ground and water in ditches," Moncks Corner Mayor Thomas Hamilton stressed on social media.

Atlantic - Disturbance 1

- Following Tropical Storm Debby's second landfall, the National Hurricane Center (NHC) is tracking a new disturbance in the Atlantic Ocean.
- A tropical depression could form near the Lesser and Greater Antilles early next week, according to the NHC.
- The area of low pressure has a medium chance of developing.
- After some possible development, as it approaches the Lesser Antilles, the disturbance is forecast to move west northwestward toward the Greater Antilles.
