Earthquake Activity

California

- Damage and injury reports continue to come in from northern California where a strong earthquake struck on Tuesday.
- More than three dozen smaller quakes – as powerful as a 4.6 magnitude – struck the area afterward, the survey reported.
- Tuesday's temblor comes a year after a 6.2 magnitude quake struck just off Humboldt County's Cape Mendocino on December 20, 2021 and caused minor damage to buildings in the area.
- There was significant structural damage, including to gas and water lines, in the Rio Dell Community, according to an afternoon update from the Humboldt County Sheriff's Office of Emergency Services. Moderate damage to properties was reported in the Eel River Valley area.
- The California Highway Patrol reported the Fernbridge, a 1,320-foot-long concrete arch bridge that crosses the Eel River in Ferndale, had cracks in four places.
- So far, 27 residences have been deemed unsafe.
- According to the Humboldt County Sheriff's Office, at least 11 people sustained injuries from the earthquake or just after.
- Currently 14,526 (25%) customers without power in Humboldt County.
- Gov. Gavin Newsom declared a state of emergency, which allows Humboldt County to access resources under the California Disaster Assistance Act, Newsom's office said in a release.
