Tropical Activity

Atlantic – Disturbance 1

- Tropical development chances are now slightly decreasing for a system percolating in the Gulf of Mexico.
- Development in the Gulf is looking less likely due to more hostile conditions than expected.
- The system will still need to be monitored closely late this week into next weekend because a sneaky tropical depression or storm could still form.
- Regardless of any development, tropical moisture is expected to roll over Florida later this week, which could trigger downpours and flash flooding, hampering recovery efforts.
- Formation chance: 48-hour – Low (10%); 7-day – Medium (40%)

Atlantic – Disturbance 2

- The NHC said the showers and thunderstorms show some signs of organization, associated with a broad area of low pressure located a few hundred miles south-southwest of the Cabo Verde Islands.
- A tropical depression is very likely to form in the next day or two as it moves slowly westward over the eastern tropical Atlantic.
- If it becomes a tropical depression, it would be called Thirteen, while the next tropical storm name on the list is Leslie.
- Formation chance: 48-hour – High (90%); 7-day – High (90%)

Atlantic –Hurricane Kirk

- All indications are it will continue to strengthen in the coming days into a large and powerful storm.
- Kirk's large wind field will produce a massive swell that will extend across a large portion of the Atlantic.
- Swells will reach the east coast of the U.S. late this weekend into next week.
