WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

January 7, 2021

COVID-19 Update

- At least 3,865 Covid-19-related deaths were reported in the country on Wednesday, according to Johns Hopkins University -- the most in a single day of the pandemic.
- The previous record -- 3,775 -- was set Tuesday, and public health officials have warned things could get worse before they get better.
- The US has reported 361,123 total deaths, according to JHU data.
- The United States reported 132,476 current Covid-19 hospitalizations on Wednesday, setting a new record high since the pandemic began, according to the Covid Tracking Project (CTP).
- This is the 36th consecutive day the US has remained above 100,000 current hospitalizations.
- Coronavirus cases have skyrocketed throughout the country in recent months, partly due to the cold winter weather and surges caused by people gathering during the holiday season.
- The nation's epicenter remains in Los Angeles County, where more than 1,000 people were killed by the virus in less than a week.
- Vaccines provide a glimmer of hope as case numbers climb, but their distribution has gone slower than expected.
- US governors are now taking new measures to get the distributed vaccines into arms faster, including mobilizing National Guard members and training more volunteers to administer doses.
