Tropical Activity

Central Pacific – Tropical Storm Hone

- Hone continues to weaken and is a strong tropical storm Monday after it blasted Hawaii's Big Island as a Category 1 hurricane with flooding rain, damaging winds and dangerous waves over the weekend.
- The Central Pacific Hurricane Center (CPHC) in Honolulu said the storm made its closest approach to the Hawaiian Islands on Sunday morning, passing about 45 miles south-southwest of South Point, Hawaii. Peak winds were estimated to be about 85 mph.
- Many areas on the Big Island picked up well over a foot of rain, sending water rushing down the steep slopes of the mountainous terrain and into low-lying neighborhoods.
- More than 21 inches of rain fell across Hakalau, with Saddle Quarry receiving nearly 20 inches.
- Keauomo, Nene Cabin and Waiakea Uka each received more than 16 inches of rain.
- Flash Flood Warnings were issued through Sunday as heavy rain lashed the area, and forecasters estimated rainfall rates of 2 inches an hour.
- As of early Monday morning, poweroutage.us showed more than 16,500 outage reports on the Big Island.
- Shelters had been opened across Hawaii's Big Island.
- Both Hawaii County Mayor Mitchell D. Roth and Hawaii Gov. Josh Green declared states of emergency ahead of the storm's impacts, urging residents to prepare for it.
