Tropical Activity

Atlantic – Hurricane Lee (CAT 1)

- Hurricane Lee is on track and slowly strengthening. The ocean and atmosphere ahead appear extremely conducive for significant intensification, so the National Hurricane Center and the computer forecasts show a super-intense hurricane as it tracks well north of Puerto Rico and the surrounding islands over the weekend.
- The NHC's forecast is for Lee to become a strong Category 4 as its forward speed slows in the waters north of the islands.
- There is high confidence that Lee's core, where the strongest winds are, will miss the northeast Caribbean islands including Puerto Rico.
- About Wednesday of next week, Lee should start a pronounced turn to the north.
- Dangerously high surf and scouring swells are likely along the entire U.S. East Coast. The energy from Lee is forecast to reach the Southeast coast Tuesday and Wednesday and move north Thursday and Friday.
- On the current schedule, the ocean water will be elevated and extremely dangerous along the Mid-Atlantic and Northeast beaches late next week and into the weekend.

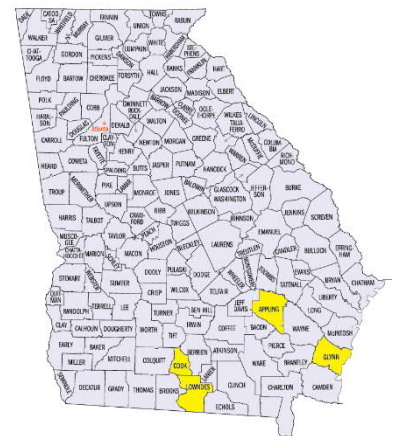

Atlantic – Disturbance 1

- Located over the eastern Atlantic near the Cabo Verde Islands moving WNW at 10 to 15 mph.
- Tropical depression could form later this week.
- Formation chance – 48-hour: Medium (60%); 7-day: High (80%)
