Wildfire Activity

California – Dixie Fire

- The Dixie Fire has more than doubled in size over the last 24 hours.
- The fire was mapped at 40,500 acres Monday night according to Cal Fire's latest estimate, growing by more than 10,000 acres during a day in which a large pyrocumulus smoke column was visible over the fire. It appeared to create several flashes of lightning in the area as well.
- Containment remains at 15 percent.
- No structures have been damaged or destroyed, though Cal Fire estimates 810 structures are threatened in the fire's current path.
- Evacuations orders are in place for certain Plumas and Butte County residents.

Oregon – Bootleg Fire

- Already the biggest fire in the country, the Bootleg Fire just keeps growing.
- In less than three days, the Klamath Basin megafire grew another 100,000 acres, bringing the total acreage to over 340,000. That's almost four times the size of Portland, making Bootleg the fourth-largest fire Oregon has seen in the past 25 years and the largest fire of the past five years.
- Conditions have been so extreme that firefighters have had to retreat to safety zones nine days in a row.
- An estimated 2,100 people had been told to leave or to be ready to go at a moment's notice, authorities said.
- At least 67 homes have been destroyed, along with more than 100 outbuildings and other structures and an estimated 3,400 homes are considered to be under threat.
