Severe Weather Activity

- At least six people have died, and several others were injured as a severe weather outbreak that produced tornadoes and large hail across the Midwest on Tuesday turned fatal as it continued its trek eastward Wednesday.
- Supercell thunderstorms tore across parts of north-central and northeastern Arkansas early Wednesday morning, then crossed into southeastern Missouri.
- According to NWS officials, a tornado with at least 130 mph winds hit Glenallen area of Bollinger County. The twister has received a preliminary rating of EF-2 on the Enhanced Fujita Scale.
- The tornado killed at least five people in Missouri and injured several others, according to a Facebook post from Bollinger County Sheriff Casey Graham.
- Nearly 90 structures were damaged, and a dozen homes were completely destroyed.
- The twister caused significant destruction in and around the small rural communities of Glen Allen and Grassy, Sheriff Casey A. Graham said.
- Later in the day, a plethora of Severe Thunderstorm Warnings and Tornado Warnings were issued around Louisville, Kentucky as a line of storms rolled through the metro and communities to the north and south.
- Kentucky Gov. Andy Beshear confirmed last Wednesday night that one person from Louisville was killed in the storms.
- Louisville Metro Emergency Services reported a tornado was to blame for displacing at least 50 people at an apartment complex in after a tornado touched down in the area.
- Louisville Mayor Craig Greenberg said much of the damage reports are in the south and southwestern parts of the city.
