Tornado Activity

Alabama

- A tornado devastated Fultondale, Ala., and other areas just north of Birmingham late Monday, killing at least one person, injuring another 20 and causing significant damage for miles.
- The twister damaged residences and businesses, trapped people in their homes, downed trees, knocked out power and blocked roads in the area, officials said.
- There are also reports of several homes possibly collapsed.
- The Jefferson County Emergency Management Agency said storm damage ranged from Fultondale to Center Point, a stretch of about 10 miles, and debris is estimated to have carried to around 15,000 feet in the air.
- About 5,000 people were without power in the state early Tuesday, according to Alabama Power.
- The National Weather Service is surveying the damage to determine the strength of the tornado.
