WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

November 19, 2021

Flood Activity

Washington

- With floodwaters receding in parts of Washington state — even as it rained again Thursday — damage assessments are beginning, and Gov. Jay Inslee is promising he'll aggressively seek federal money.
- In a visit to Whatcom County on Wednesday, Inslee said about 500 homes had damage from the storms. He spoke with the mayors of Everson and Sumas and was astonished at the devastation he saw, The Bellingham Herald reported.
- Sumas city officials said Thursday that volunteers had begun going door-to-door to determine which homes were damaged.
- At least 300 homes and about 30 businesses were damaged in Sumas by the floods, the city's mayor told KOMO News.
- The Red Cross said Thursday it is operating three shelters in western Washington to support residents displaced by flooding.
- The Pacific Northwest was hit with days of continuous rain and wind that only eased earlier this week. More rain fell in Bellingham from Saturday through Monday than normally falls there during all of November, about 5.57 inches.
- On Monday, Gov. Inslee declared a severe weather state of emergency in Clallam, Grays Harbor, Island, Jefferson, Lewis, King, Kitsap, Pierce, Mason, San Juan, Skagit, Snohomish, Thurston, and Whatcom counties.
