WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

January 11, 2024

Severe Weather Outlook South

- A rinse-and-repeat weather pattern is in play across the South, leading to damaging winds, heavy rain and possible tornadoes through the end of the workweek.
- The storm system is similar to the event that impacted the region earlier in the week, with some of the same communities under a heightened risk for severe storms.
- Storms are expected to develop over East Texas and track east toward Arkansas and Louisiana overnight.
- Thursday's threat is a Level 3 out of 5, impacting more than 1.2 million people in the bull's-eye around Shreveport and Bossier City in Louisiana, Hot Springs in Arkansas and Texarkana in Arkansas and Texas.
- On Friday morning, the FOX Forecast Center expects thunderstorms to be ongoing from Thursday night, with additional storms developing across the South throughout the day that could produce damaging wind gusts and tornadoes.
- Friday's threat zone runs from east of the Mississippi River through parts of Florida and northward into the Carolinas.
- Severe storms will be possible in Atlanta, Tallahassee in Florida, Columbia in South Carolina and Charlotte and Raleigh in North Carolina.
