Declaration Activity

DR 4635 Washington

- On Wednesday, President Joe Biden approved a disaster declaration for areas of Washington state hit hardest during the historic flooding in November.
- Unprecedented flooding in northwest Washington caused widespread damage and left officials across several counties scrambling to document the costs in the hopes of qualifying for federal relief dollars.
- The declaration makes federal funding available to affected people in Clallam, Skagit and Whatcom counties, including the Lummi Nation, Nooksack Indian Tribe and Quileute Tribe.
- The flooding occurred in November after days of heavy rain. Emergency officials in Whatcom County called it the worst flooding since 1990.
- Officials estimated more than 500 people were displaced from homes in Whatcom County alone.
- More than 80% of the buildings in Sumas were damaged by floodwaters, including 300 homes and 35 businesses.
