Tropical Activity

Atlantic – Disturbance 1

- A non-tropical low-pressure system with storm-force winds is located a couple of hundred miles east-southeast of Cape Hatteras, North Carolina.
- This system is forecast to move east northeastward during the next several days, and it could gradually lose its frontal characteristics by mid-week over the subtropical Atlantic Ocean.
- By early this weekend, the low could acquire some subtropical characteristics while it moves eastward or east northeastward over the open waters of the central Atlantic Ocean.
- Formation chance through 48 hours...low...near 0 percent.
- Formation chance through 5 days...low...20 percent.

Declaration Update

DR 4618 Pennsylvania

- Pennsylvania residents in eight counties that experienced widespread damages from storms related to Hurricane Ida in September will get more time to file applications for federal aid.
- Gov. Tom Wolf announced Friday that the White House had approved extending the Federal Emergency Management Agency registration deadline to Dec. 10. The original deadline was set to expire on Wednesday.
- The Wolf administration estimates the public and private property damages associated with Ida statewide will exceed $41 million.
