WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

December 23, 2022

Arctic Blast

- A dangerous arctic outbreak is bringing some of the coldest weather in decades to parts of the Rockies and Northern Plains and will soon plunge into the Deep South and linger through the Christmas holiday weekend.
- The bitter cold air is on the move and had spread as far south as southern Texas and as far east as the mid-Mississippi Valley as of Thursday afternoon.
- At least one preliminary all-time record low has been set so far. Casper, Wyoming, dropped to minus 42 degrees early Thursday morning, which is the coldest temperature there in records dating to 1939.
- Denver saw its coldest air in a generation Thursday morning. Temperatures dropped to minus 24 degrees, which was the coldest the city has seen since December 22, 1990.
- Wind chill alerts have been issued by the National Weather Service for more than 100 million people, from the Canadian border to the Mexican border and eastward into parts of the Southeast and Northeast, even as far south as Florida and the Rio Grande Valley.
- Subzero lows are forecast as far south and east as northern Oklahoma, Missouri, northern Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky to end the week.
- Strong winds will lead to dangerously low wind chills in the Plains as this arctic front plunges southward.
- Wind chills of minus 30 degrees or colder are a good bet from the Northern and Central Plains into the Midwest.
- The arctic front will nosedive through the rest of the Southeast – including all of Florida – by Friday.
- Below-freezing air will penetrate through Texas, the northern Gulf Coast and northern and central Florida for multiple days.
