Winter Storm Landon

- Winter Storm Landon continued to dump ice and snow on the Plains, Midwest and Ohio Valley Thursday, which led to travel woes both on the ground and in the air.
- About 4,000 domestic flights were canceled Thursday, according to the flight-tracking website FlightAware. DFW led with more than 900 cancellations.
- More than 50,000 Texas homes and businesses were without power Thursday morning, according to PowerOutage.us. This was the highest outage total of any state in the U.S. as of 8 a.m. EST.
- PowerOutage.us reported a rapid rise in power outages in the Memphis metro area mid-morning Thursday as the icing worsened. By 9:30 a.m. EST, some 12,000 homes and businesses were without power. The weight of the ice was starting to bring trees down in the city.
- Over 100 million people are under Winter and Ice Storm Warnings and Winter Weather Advisories.
- Inches of sleet have piled up across Arkansas over the past 12 hours as the icy precipitation spreads across the region. The worst of the sleet has occurred in the central part of the state surrounding the capital city of Little Rock.
- By midnight, Oklahoma City received 3 inches of snow. This was enough to break a 109-year-old snowfall record for Groundhog Day.
- Kentucky, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Missouri have declared a state of emergency.
- Landon is the fourth winter storm to cause travel delays and power outage concerns across multiple states in just the past three weeks.
- Along the warmer side of the storm, strong thunderstorms capable of damaging wind gusts and tornadoes are possible Thursday in parts of Mississippi and Alabama, the Storm Prediction Center said of Winter Storm Landon.
